

Advocacy, Allies And Peer Support

Posted on October 2, 2019

Case Study One:

Task One (a)

The issue identified in Study One is that the parents are failing to fulfill the essentials of the relevant Case Plan Objectives. The organization is currently instigating a strategy limiting the conveying of clientele in office automobiles. The organization has an opinion that it is the responsibility of the parents to make the system work, and if they earnestly want to create a change in their lives, they will somehow find a manner to get things done (Power, Bartlett & Hall, 2016).

The client's point of view is that they have to use public transportation, which is mainly limited to families living in remote areas. Services are usually office-based in city sites. Parents argue that it is difficult to access these amenities and consequently meet their case plan goals (Goad & Mascall, 2009).

The power structure defines the hierarchical structure of power within the organization or the state. In this case, working with a manager is described, and somehow, the administration of the city is also involved here. It seems like the manager has weak power in the organization, whereas the city's administration is unable to provide suitable transport to remote areas. There are two issues identified in the case. The manager is not happy with the new policy and wants to act on it; it is an individual issue. At the same time, the societal problem is the issue of parents and their difficulties in fulfillment of their Case Plan Goals (Kaschak, 1983).

Task One (b)

Two parties are affected in the case. Firstly, the parents regarding the fulfillment of the case requirements, and secondly, the manager and organization are concerned.

The organization is positively affected by the case. The organisation has implemented a new policy with which they have restricted the usage of office transport for transporting clients. By applying this new policy, the organization will save the transportation costs, depreciation costs, repair and maintenance costs of vehicles, fueling prices and other relevant expenses. They can further utilize the vehicles for official work only. So, the policy has an overall positive effect on the organization (Moorman, 2009).

On the other hand, two parties are negatively affected by the new policy of the organization, namely the manager and the parents or the clients of the organization. The manager is not at all satisfied with the recent plan of the organization which is restricting the usage of office transport for transporting clients, so he wants to act as he considers it unjust and unfair. The second party affected by the policy is the parents. They have already mentioned their issues of transportation, being located in remote areas it becomes difficult for them to cope up with the requirements of the Case Plan Goals.

Task One (c)

Two common forms of oppression are identified here in the case study. One extreme persecution identified is the organization's new strategic policy, which restricts the use of official vehicles for client transportation, which comes under the internalized form of oppression. The manager is worried, and in a broader view, this is also morally ruthless to restrict the usage of vehicles for needy parents. Another dominant form of oppression found in the case is the insufficient availability of public transport which is suppressing the parents to meet their requirements regarding the case ("Advocacy, Support, and Rehabilitation Programs", 2004).

To identify the sources of these oppressions, a detailed look at the official, religious and moral ideology is required. For the first instance, philosophical ideology and administrative or political ideology is the source of oppression as the policy of the organization is low on moral and administrative grounds. The second issue of the scarcity of the availability of public transport in remote areas falls under the head of political or administrative ideology. The provision of transportation to the general public in every place, especially in remote areas, is solely the duty of the government and administration of that particular area.

Task One (d)

This issue could be resolved on the political and administrative level in the state. The organization could also play its part in helping the clients by facilitating them by providing their official transport to the parents. The government can provide a cheap and safe transportation system to remote areas so this way it would help the parents greatly to get better access to the transportation system and hence they will be able to cope with the problems in a better way, leading them to meet the requirements of their Case Plan goals. Verdicts prepared on all the essential products, backgrounds, housing, commodities, and services acquired to be made available for the kid's harmless utilization have got to be in the paramount wellbeing of the kid.

Sr. No	ISSUE	SOLUTION
--------	-------	----------

1	a new strategic policy which is restricting the use of official vehicles	the organization could also play its part in helping the clients by facilitating them by providing their official transport to the parents
2	insufficient availability of public transport	The government can provide a cheap and safe transportation system to remote areas, so this way; it would help the parents greatly to get better access to the transportation system
3	Manager's concern	Raising up of voice in the organization and to the administration of the city to get a better solution

Task One (e)

The government and the administration are always responsible for making the lives of their citizen better by improving their standard of living. The solutions provided for the above-mentioned issues will result in an overall positive atmosphere all around. The primary problem is the parent's transportation system, so if the Government or administration provides a suitable and comfortable transport system, it will help the parents in following their case plan in a much better way, and they will then be able to fulfill the requirements at the appointed time. The solution will promptly help the parents who are in distress currently, as their main issue is transportation from remote areas.

By ranking the solutions proposed above, according to their impact on social justice, the top recommended solution that leads to higher social justice is the provision of the transportation system in remote areas. The next answer is regarding the management's policy. It has a lesser impact as it will only affect those parents who are availing of their case plan goals. So this will impact only the relevant parents and their families. The last solution regarding the manager will have the least impact as it is an individual act of one particular person and will, therefore, have its influence only within the organization he is working in. The issue regarding the manager and his point regarding the policy is entirely valid. He doesn't support the plan, so he is required to raise his voice within the organization as well as any right forum to get a better solution for the issue.

Task Two

Identify Your Allies/Resources

The local administration of the city and the particular organisation regarding the Child protection system can help in achieving our social justice outcome.

Tasks For Allies

The local administration of the city can help by providing a suitable and economical transportation system for remote areas to help the parents.

The Short-Term Outcome

The outcome of the assigned task will be that parents will be able to fulfill their requirements of the case plan goals efficiently and effectively.

The Long-Term Outcome

The goal for the individual clients I am working with is to provide them assistance in the long run so that they can efficiently and consistently fulfill their requirements and address the issues with the child to make him a better citizen of society.

The Format for Task Two:

Allies/Resources	Tasks	The Short-Term Goals	Long-term Goals	Ultimate Social Justice-Related Outcome
The local administration	Provision of a suitable and economical transportation system	Requirements of case plan goals will be met	Help the child to become a better citizen	A better individual in society organization of the Child protection system	Provision of office vehicles	Helping parents	Helping the child	Making the child a better citizen

Communique Email:

Dear Sir,

I am Mr. ABC working as a case manager in the Department of Child Safety. The reason that forced me to seek your help is that my department is working with parents involved with the child protection system, but they consistently do not meet the requirements of their Case Plan Goals, and the reason they mention behind it is that they don't have a driver's license and public transport is extremely limited, particularly for families living in rural and remote areas. The majority of the services are typically office-based in central city locations, so it is difficult for the parents to access these services and, therefore, meet their case plan goals.

As the issue discussed above is serious, I want you to assist the people living in the remote areas by providing a local transportation system as soon as possible. As the parents are unable to fulfill the requirements of their cases, it is severely affecting their children, and in the long run, it is affecting our future generation.

I hope to get a positive response from your side soon. Thanks in anticipation.

Regards

MANAGER

Department Of Child Safety

References

Power, A., Bartlett, R., & Hall, E. (2016). Peer advocacy in a personalised landscape. Journal Of Intellectual Disabilities, 20(2), 183-193. <http://dx.doi.org/10.1177/1744629516634561>

Goad, D., & Mascall, B. (2009). Canada: advocacy and public support. Museum International, 44(4), 196-200. <http://dx.doi.org/10.1111/j.1468-0033.1992.tb01064.x>

Kaschak, E. (1983). In support of responsible advocacy: A reply to Hatch. American Psychologist, 38(8), 956-957. <http://dx.doi.org/10.1037/0003-066x.38.8.956>

Moorman, J. (2009). Advocacy Today, Advocacy Tomorrow, Advocacy Forever!. Virginia Libraries, 55(4). <http://dx.doi.org/10.21061/valib.v55i4.1091>

Advocacy, Support, and Rehabilitation Programs. (2004). American Annals Of The Deaf, 149(2), 213-246. <http://dx.doi.org/10.1353/aad.2004.0018>