

Educational Social and Economic Value of College

Posted on September 11, 2019

Introduction

Education is highly important, and in the current competitive world, higher education plays a vital role. Due to the increase of sophisticated careers in the practical world, a college education is the only source that enables an individual to develop an expensive career. There are many different ways through which it can be proved that college is a highly important and essential part of making a good and effective career in the labour community. Beyond high fees and stressful times, college helps an individual to learn the better ways through which he could be able to improve his social and economic status. It is also observed that people with college degrees have a better lifestyle, more time for enjoyment, and don't have to struggle for money and other issues in life. The main aim of the paper is to prove that college is highly important.

Discussion

The college graduates are completely different from other people. If they have achieved a degree with the proper skills and grooming, they are highly admired in society. Successful individuals have very important and influential leadership skills, teamwork, and technical skills, which are highly appreciated in the business world. The current world doesn't expect a college graduate to be without such skills because they are the necessary grooming of an individual in college time.

One of the most influential ways to describe college as important is that college graduates earn more than others. According to the United States Bureau of Labor Statistics (BLS), the workers who have a college degree earn around about $500 per week on average more than that of the workers who have only a high school diploma (Yan, 5569-5576). This higher salary is a lifetime achievement, and in every job, people with a college degree get promotions earlier than that of high school ones. A worker who has a college degree can rarely be unemployed. In addition to the potential of making money, college degree graduates have career stability and very few chances of being unemployed for a long period of time. Only 2.7% of college graduates have faced employment, and the reasons are personal rather than the competitive market demands. In comparison to college graduates, 5.2% of high school graduates have faced unemployment, which is double that of the number of individuals who have faced unemployment.

“If you have four years to complete your college education, do it.”

— Bo Jackson

According to a survey, it was reported that most of the house owners are college degree holders. Almost 75% of the people included in the survey who owned their homes were college graduates. Of the people who attended the school only 11% while just 14% of the people are those who have attended college for a period but didn't complete their college degrees. The college degree has a number of benefits, in which the most prominent is the stabilized accounts. The college graduates have maintained their bank accounts properly and don't keep expensive credit at all. They believe in the investment. Most of the high school graduates don't even have the bank accounts.

College education helps in the improvement of skills as well as enables individuals to broaden their experience in life. People who have experienced a college education have a different way of observing things and analyzing situations. Career preparation is highly important in the current world. The need to spend time with the experts is known, and this is only facilitated by the colleges. The college professors have exposure to the tight and competitive outer market, which results in their behavior toward the students being informative and quite grooming. It is helpful for the students to get a picture of future challenges and the best ways to overcome the basic issues. One of the main issues to discuss is that the high schools are unable to build that much analytical skills like reporting and professional writing.

Education is a requirement, and the best place for young adults is college, where they would be able to achieve the best ways to understand and practice life. Currently, the world is getting an expensive place to live. Everything is getting expensive and unreachable. By having a college degree, a person is able to achieve a good salary job, which will lead to improving his finances. It would be highly helpful in maintaining the flow of life easily (Ocal, Turkan, and Linnea, 58-74). A college degree is for a lifetime. A person who has achieved a college degree would be able to use it for a lifetime.

“The American Dream is one of success, home ownership, college education for one's children, and have a secure job to provide these and other goals.”

— Leonard Boswell

People like famous singers, rappers, and business owners had the luck that they successfully developed their lives, businesses and careers with the help of their natural skills. This case could not be implemented for the common public. The common man has only one way to become a millionaire or to achieve a sustainable and reliable life. The first one is the college education and its proper implementation in the practical career. College education brings a boost to the lifestyle.

Professional writing skills need proper grooming, which results in effective paper composition, it is only possible by understanding the problem explanation and solution presentation effective strategies used during a paper's composition. The high school teachers are unable to groom these skills because of the student's inability to understand the complexity of paper composition. A college education helps in the achievement of all the possible skills which would be helpful in writing the academic paper writing. There are outnumbered experts who have confirmed that the people who have achieved the college degree with proper grooming of the skills have built and secured successful careers within the next five years of graduation.

One of the most argued points in everyone's mind is whether the assignment and quizzes system is helpful in career development because it increases stress levels and reduces positivity among the students. The experts answered this argument very effectively and described its cause and effects (Becker, 346-354). It is observed that the students won't be able to learn if the evaluation cannot be performed. Initially, exams were considered, but now only quizzes and assignments are conducted, which helps the teachers to evaluate the position of the individual and whether he is serious in the studies and is able to clear out the term or not. Teachers also find through assignments which area they have to focus. My writing skills have also improved, which will help me to make a successful career. There were almost 67% of individuals who achieved a college degree explained that they had succeeded in building successful careers because of their good and appropriate academic writing skills and better performances in the projects.

The college-graduated individuals have an opportunity to be free of whatever to do with their life (Baker et al.). They have maintained financial status, which helps them to try new things, enjoy their life and practice the hobbies which they love to practice. For example, if an individual has completed his graduation in the business, he won't have enough to do after office, and one job would be enough for him to regulate his financial status. So they would have enough time to spend with their family and friends.

“Education is the most powerful weapon which you can use to change the world.”

Maturity is one of the most important things which makes an individual's life complete and well-groomed. A young adult could not be considered mature according to his age, but he has spent a couple of years under the strict supervision of highly polished professors who teach him the lessons of life (Agopsowicz). The people who are groomed under such practices have the capability to analyse the situations and to defend themselves from mistakes properly. They have good tolerance practices, which results in making proactive and productive decisions in life. It is observed that most of the college graduates are married and are spending a complete life with their wives and children.

Conclusions

In a nutshell, it can be concluded that a college education is highly important for an individual to practice a good and highly successful career. Most college graduates have secured successful careers in their first five years, while high school graduates struggle hard to achieve their goals. The students who are groomed under highly experienced professors are able to handle their lives much more properly than comparatively the people who didn't attend college at all. It would not be wrong to say that a college education helps in making the foundation of an individual's career. In finalizing my argument, it is suggested that I don't consider the college degree just a piece of paper because it is worth more and completely changes an individual's life.

Works Cited

Agopsowicz, Andrew, et al. "Careers and Mismatch for College Graduates: College and Non-college Jobs." (2017).

Baker, Rachel, et al. The Effect of Labor Market Information on Community College Students' Major Choice. No. w23333. National Bureau of Economic Research, 2017.

Becker, Gary S. "Underinvestment in college education?." The American Economic Review 50.2 (1960): 346-354.

Ocal, Turkan, and Linnea Ehri. "Spelling ability in college students predicted by decoding, print exposure, and vocabulary." Journal of College Reading and Learning 47.1 (2017): 58-74.

Yan, Cao, et al. "CAD Education of College Students with Engineering Practice and Team Work." Eurasia Journal of Mathematics, Science and Technology Education 13.8 (2017): 5569-5576.