

The World's Top Ten Most Famous People

Posted on September 14, 2018

Abstract

A famous individual can be an immortal, celebrity, influential, or important person whose actions and opinions strongly influence the course of events. An individual considered famous works hard to enact change for the better or even worse (Driessens, 2014). The person has a greater impact on society based on his/her work, intentionally or unintentionally. Thus, the paper has illustrated the world's top ten most famous people based on Google searches and the number of books that possess information concerning the individual.

The illustrated people include Jesus Christ, with 24.9 million monthly searches and incalculable total books. It's not essential to explain the four gospels that illustrate the way Jesus became famous, but the most interesting thing is that Christ was born of the virgin. He also died 33 years after being a famous victim of crucifixion, and he rose from death by supernatural powers after three days. The other is Muhammad, who has 13.6 million times per month, and the number of books is incalculable. For those who are not Muslims, Muhammad is the founder of Islam, while for the Muslims, he was not the founder since the religion existed, and he made restoration to better maintenance. The third is Abraham; he has 9.1 million Google searches per month, and the total number of books is more than two million. The fourth is Moses, followed by Siddhartha Gautama, Paul the Apostle, Adolf Hitler, William Shakespeare, Leonardo di ser Piero da Vinci, and Sir Isaac Newton. Therefore, many people could have different categorizations based on different aspects, but based on Google searches and the number of books, these are the top famous people worldwide.

Introduction

When it comes to illustrating a famous person in the world, most people become filled with a lot of people who have done anything good for society, an individual whose name is spoken in most parts of the world. Therefore, who is a famous person? A famous individual can be an immortal, celebrity, influential, or important person whose actions and opinions strongly influence the course of events (famous person. WordNet 3.0, 2008). He/she is considerably prominent in history. Thus, who can you rank among this category of famous people? Some people may rank their celebrity by acknowledging their efforts with the Nobel Peace Prize, while others can contain the long-lasting legacy that was used to inspire other people to act. On the other hand, some have come up with an invention that has been used to make life better.

However, any person considered famous has worked hard to enact change for the better or even worse. The person has a greater impact on society based on his/her work both intentionally and unintentionally. Some famous people come up due to striving for political change, while others just made a simple decision to obey or disobey someone, and both have received critical acclaim in one way or another (Hoffman, Mansoor, Navneet, Lathika, & Julia, 2017). Therefore, in this paper, we will illustrate the top ten famous people in the world. The ranking of these great names is based on the searches of people on Google and approximately the number of books that an individual has written in them or written on his/her own. If you travel from different cities and remote areas and ask anyone about the name listed, there is a high chance that the person being asked has heard of the name. Therefore, who could be the first on the list? Take a look at which people have a greater influence on society.

The world's most famous people

Jesus of Nazareth

Google gives an illustration of 24.9 million searches per month and incalculable total books. It's not essential to explain the four gospels that illustrate the way Jesus became famous, but the most interesting thing is that Christ was born of the virgin. He also died 33 years after being a famous victim of crucifixion, and he rose from death by supernatural powers after three days. He then ascended to heaven and sat on the right hand of God. The earth contains seven billion people and 33.3% worship Christ. Thus, it's possible that the remaining percentage has information that is specific to his life (Flamehorse, 2013). For instance, other religions like Islam and Judaism have perfect information concerning Jesus since Jesus was venerated as an important prophet in their religion. It's believed that Muhammad spoke to the moment he sprang to heaven on the horse. The only communities on the earth that don't know Jesus are the primitive, un-conducted tribes in areas like the Amazon jungle.

Google also claims that more than 129864880 books have been written bounding the thoughts of human history. This includes more than 25 million Bibles that are printed each year. It has been estimated that 40% of the book in the world speaks of Jesus. This percentage includes books concerning Christianity, history or even evangelism. Therefore, I suppose that almost every section of the world's written book contains information concerning Jesus Christ.

Muhammad Prophet

Google has illustrated that Muhammad is being searched 13.6 million times per month, and the number of books is incalculable. For those who are not Muslims, Muhammad is the founder of Islam, while for the Muslims, he was not the founder since the religion existed, and he made restoration to better maintenance. He is also believed to have unified the religion under the philosophy God had conveyed to him under the revelation he noted down, and it became the Quran (Cedman, 2018). Islam is an Arabic name that implies surrendering and, at this moment, is the willpower of Allah.

Therefore, there are very few films about him.

Muhammad is the second most famous person in history, given that it's illegal by Islamic law for them to portray Muhammad in some way. Islamic law states that he is the last prophet sent by the Lord to teach a human being the habits of righteousness and peace, and he is very holy to be seen by the sinful eye. Muhammad died on the 8th of June A.D 632 in Saudi Arabia after uniting the whole region of the Middle East by the single God named Allah (McCutcheon, Lange, & Houran, 2002). The name Muhammad has many spellings, including Mohammed, the Moammar, the Mehmet, the Mahomet, and many others. Therefore, Muhammad is a common name found all over the world, with more than 200 million contenders. Muhammad implies, "Praised."

Abraham

Abraham is the third most famous, with more than 9.1 million Google searches per month, and the total number of books is more than two million. Abraham's searches in the Old Testament of the Bible aren't as reliable as those of Hitler and Moses since there are few famous ancient people who have the same name as Abraham. Thus, the top famous people with Abraham's name are Abraham of the Holy Bible, Lincoln Abraham, and also Abraham Helsing. Therefore, if you happen to go to any location of the world and ask Abraham the prophet, 99% of the societies will not have a problem answering the question.

Abraham is revealed in three monotheisms as the prophet, and one of them is the people from the Middle East believed to be just a single God. Islam, Christianity and Judaism are known to be the "Abraham religion." In the Holy Bible, God made the covenant with him due to his devoutness and his faith in God, while those around him followed the newest gods that took everyone for fancy. This was a result of his test of killing his son as a sacrifice. In Muslims, they believe that the son being sacrificed is Ishmael while in Christianity is Isaac. Thus his faithfulness granted him the blessing of being the father of many nations.

Moses

The fourth most famous is Moses, with more than 2.7 million searches per month and more than eight million books illustrating him. He is adored by three main monotheisms, i.e., Judaism, Islam and Christianity. Moses is considered one of the greatest prophets of the Old Testament and is the rescuer of the Israelites from their slavery in the Egyptian nation. He then led them to Canaan, which is the guaranteed Land, and the Law Giver, who relayed the Lord's commandments to the Israelites and then founded Jewish cultural life and traditions. When he was an infant, he was rescued by the pharaoh's daughter after she found him floating in the basket in the river Nile. She then named him based on the Hebrews verb "to draw" and raised him as his son in the Egyptian noble house.

After becoming a big man, he escaped to the wilderness after killing an Egyptian for beating the Hebrew slave. In the wilderness, he met God in the form of a burning bush, who sent him to Egypt to go and deliver his people from Egyptian slavery (Josh, 2017). He was 80 years old when the exodus started, and they wandered for 40 years in the wilderness. They received God's law through Moses and carried it in the arc of the covenant as they moved until they reached the Promised Land, which was full of milk and honey. He then died at 120 years old and was buried in the Moab valley opposite Mount Nebo. His memorial is everlasting, and he is still known today.

Siddhartha Gautama (Buddha)

It may be surprising that the people involved in the search for the Buddha are not Buddhists. The approximation of the Google searches of Gautama is more than 4 million per month, and seven million books have information about him. Gautama was born in Lumbini in Nepal in 563 B.C., 24 years after the sack of Jerusalem by Babylon. He was a great mortal man that kept "acquired the spiritual awakening and also peace of mind" while he was 35 by age as he was seated under the Bodhi tree. Buddha stayed in meditation for more than 49 days until when he acquired the knowledge of ending the people's suffering on earth since he provided a lot of teachings that could be used to free most people from the grief of life. They are known to be "The Noble Eightfold Path, and they include the right intention, the right review, the right speech, the right concentration, the right livelihood, the right action, the right effort, and the right mindfulness." Therefore, if a person holds these, he may put away all the worries and be pleased and unaffected by anything. Gautama is being worshipped by Hinduism and the ten representatives of Vishnu, the God above all the others. Bahai also adores Gautama as the manifestation of the Lord who came down to teach human beings the love of each other and the art of being happy. Gautama is believed to have died at the age of 150 years.

Paul the Apostle

Google Company illustrates that 3.35 million searches in one month and seven million books illustrate information concerning Paul the Apostle. His responsibility was disseminating Christianity with its theology, ideas, and principles. Paul is still venerated as a saint and thus is respected as the profound teacher, preacher, and also chief Christian apostle. All of his Christian work was done through thirteen letters to different churches and the people.

Paul was the first apostle to write what we presently call the New Testament of the bible. The first latter was addressing the church of the Galatians, and it took him five years. Paul's theological illustration of his epistles has detailed statements concerning Jesus' philosophical ethics, and salvation is given to the Gospel. The main message in his writing is that the people should believe that Christ is the child of God, the savior of the people of the world; he rose after his death and then ascended to heaven. Therefore, no one will die if he/she is righteous. His teaching makes him well known by most of the people in the world than any of the twelve apostles. Before he died, he had been permanently cemented by his writings. He was arrested in Rome and then beheaded due to the incitement of political discord.

Adolf Hitler

Hitler is a notorious phenomenon when it comes to the issue of war. Google provides an investigation of 6.1 million Google searches per month and more than 175000 books containing information about him. Historically, he remains the main cause of World War II. He did it with two main desires: to be a powerful person in the world, preferably in history, in case he doesn't rule the world. Secondly, it causes a lot of pain for those accountable for Germany's humiliation and the despondent defeat in WWI. It was after Germany was told to pay for all the expenses in WWI, which destroyed its economy. He manipulated the people and then led to WWII, which led to the death of more than 71 million people, and Hitler is to be blamed for it. He was not ashamed of what he did but instead was happy. He is always listed as a famous person due to his evil actions and fiction, especially for the public polls like "the devil," "Stalin," etc. Thus, he is considered the most evil person in history.

William Shakespeare

The eighth most famous person is Shakespeare, with over 7.4 million Google searches in one month and more than one million books containing information about him. He is considered to be the greatest writer in English and many languages in human history. He is the source of a few vocabularies and phrases common in the native language. About 50% of the English phrases are drawn from King James Bible, while 30% of the remaining are from Bard. In case someone uses "It's all Greek to me," "Foods for the gods", and much more, then you will be quoting Shakespeare's work.

Based on the committee of the Nobel Prizes, they said that William Shakespeare would be the first person in history to have won more than a single Prize in a literal work. If he had lived to this century, his plays would not have deserved one, but the sonnets are more than worth the body of the literal work that has been honored recently. The most interesting thing about the famous William Shakespeare is that his fame has very little to do with him as an individual and his life. Shakespeare only attended grammar school for his education and then started working as an actor before becoming a playwright. The greatness of Shakespeare relies on the blend of his finest poetry, multifaceted philosophy, and profound and lively wit. In case one person does it once, he is considered a great writer, but Shakespeare did this 37 times, and he doesn't account for 154 sonnets and the English repertory. Hamlet and King Lear are universally considered to be masterpieces, the benchmarks by which most of the dramas after and before are being judged.

Leonardo di ser Piero da Vinci

Google may be inaccurate in judging his findings since when Leonardo is searched, most of the pages that come out concern the ninja turtles and the people who drowned on the Titanic. But if you search for da Vinci's full name, you will find out how he is renowned. Da Vinci would do anything; thus, he is considered the greatest resume in history. He was an engineer, anatomist, inventor, mathematician, architect, geologist, musician, cartographer, writer, botanist, and also a sculptor. He was able to invent the sniper rifle. He also bolted the refracting telescopes on the wheellock musket and took snapshots of the people from 1000 yards. He invented the wheellock musket and later a parachute 300 years before the claimed honor of Louis Sebastien in the 1700s. It worked well; he invented a hang glider 400 years before it took off. He gave a try of the invention of the helicopter, but it didn't work. He was the first to have an understanding of the spinning helical blade.

He invented a tank that could be propelled through the turning of the crankshaft and fire in both directions. He invented mitrailleuse, which is the precursor of what is considered to be a machine gun. The machine had multiple barrels that were firing at the same time. He invented scissors for shearing clothes. His sculptures, known as Michelangelo, envisioned a gigantic horse sculpture from poured bronze, which is impossible to create using the technology of today. Lastly, da Vinci was considered to be a pretty good printer.

Sir Isaac Newton

The last famous person is Isaac Newton, who has a total of one million searches per month and more than 400000 books written about him. The discoverer of calculus, Albert Einstein, could be placed on the list with approximately more than 6.1 million Google searches in one month, but he has few books written concerning him. Despite more searches concerning him, Einstein could not have existed based on his theory of relativity had Isaac Newton no more (Donna & C., 2009). Newton generalized a binomial theorem that invented a reflecting telescope that coined the gravity of the world and gave the Catholic Church the importance of hegemony on geocentrism in the final knockout blow. Galileo and Copernicus faced the Inquisition, but no one tried to reproach "Newton's Principia Mathematica." Maybe arguing with someone's observation may be inane enough, but creating an argument with math, as in Newton's case, was impossible (Winfred, 2017). Therefore he proved the heliocentric theories and later explained why and how the microscopic objects in the rest of the world move as they are doing. He investigated this on his own and then researched the elements and the principles of optics. He also invented the pet door. The interesting aspect of Newton's life is that he was very busy and never had sex; therefore, he died as a virgin at the age of 84 years.

Conclusion

In summary, a famous individual can be an immortal, celebrity, influential, or important person whose actions and opinions strongly influence the course of events. An individual considered famous worked hard to enact change for the better or even worse. The person has a greater impact on society based on his/her work both intentionally and unintentionally. Thus, the paper has illustrated the top ten most famous people in the world based on Google searches and the number of books that possess information concerning the individual. The illustrated people include Jesus Christ, Muhammad, Abraham, Moses, Siddhartha Gautama, Paul the Apostle, Adolf Hitler, William Shakespeare, Leonardo di ser Piero da Vinci, and Sir Isaac Newton. Therefore, many people could have different categorizations based on different aspects, but based on Google searches and the number of books, these are the top famous people worldwide.
