

Zombies in Hollywood Movies

Posted on August 26, 2021

It has been observed that generally, people are divided into two groups, especially when they are giving their opposite stance to another group. It is true that perception and thinking differ, and people are free to take their stance on controversial issues. Usually, two groups are formed: one who agrees with the scenario and others who disagree. Though it may seem strange to some, recently, people have been categorized into two categories on a controversial issue regarding plants and zombies. One of the groups believes that zombies are better than plants. They claim that it is wrong to consider zombies as antagonists. Rather, they must be considered as friends. While on the other hand, another group opposes the first group. There is various evidence that supports the claim that zombies are misunderstood (Donnelly, 2014). Claims and reviews suggest that there is a need to look deep down at the details for revealing the fact that it is not the zombies that are a threat for humans, rather plants are the real antagonists.

It has been witnessed that in Hollywood movies, the way Zombies are portrayed, they fear humans, and that is the main reason why Zombies are considered someone who destroy the land and threaten humans. In most of the movies, Zombies are shown as creatures that eat human tissue and are undead. People who enjoy horror have raised many questions about why Zombies are always presented as antagonists, and this question inculcates in many researchers an instinct to work upon this creature. Verstynen and Bradley covered a lengthy study on Zombies in which they claimed that there is a need to look in-depth to reveal the fact that actually, zombies are friends, not enemies. Some also believe that the zombie's behaviour points towards a neurological condition. There is a need to understand the fact that Zombies don't eat humans. Rather, they only need some human-like tissues that satisfy their hunger.

It won't be wrong to say that it is easy to misunderstand things and individuals about whom people know nothing. Same goes with the Zombies, for knowing the fact that they are friends, not the antagonists there is an extreme need to study Zombie's behavior. They need help as their brains maintain very limited abilities, i.e. allow them to move their limbs, neck, jaws, etc. They are much better than some humans who kill hundreds of people in terrorist activities and threaten international peace. Not only movies but there are other things as well that are used for conveying a thought which may revolutionize the idea that people have about something. As in the game Plant vs. Zombies, it has been seen that plants are uncovered as the real culprits while zombies are supported as real friends. This idea incorporates human's instinct to dig out the reality and positively think of zombies. There is also a message that sometimes, a veil helps in deceiving, but the real eye and research could help in knowing the truth.

Limited thinking must be changed as there is a need to look out of the box as it is the time to reveal the hidden. Zombies are one of the creatures about whom people don't have their viewpoint. Rather, they perceive Zombies as they are direct to think of. It is interesting to note that people considered plants to be their friends. Rather, not much of people know that not the Zombies but plants are the real antagonists. Keeping this controversial issue in mind, in 2009, a game was also launched in which it was portrayed that zombies are better than plants (Games, 2009). Keeping in mind this game (plants vs. zombies), it could be said that zombies are better than plants in every way. Zombies' infantry class has more accurate and faster guns that help them deal with the damage at a faster rate. Each of the classes has some speciality that makes them better than plants. Taking a look at this game it could be seen that "tank class" has more range of its type that is healthier. The healer is another class of the zombies that have been presented in this class and plants have been presented as a creature that got jealous from all the classes of zombies. Though healers are being portrayed as a class that heals less, they can damage a peashooter. Another characteristic that makes it better than plants is its high mobility. The third class of zombies is "supporter" and it moves faster than others at the time of the shooting and throwing the stun.

As a whole, it could be said that things that go out of the way become controversy and grasp more attention than the usual things. It has also been witnessed that movies inspired people to think more about zombies. One the evidence of the zombie's popularity is "Plants vs. Zombies", in which it has been purposely showing that zombies as better than plants (Shute et al., 2015). It looks like zombies are invading Earth and plants are protecting it, but in reality, plants are the real antagonist who gets jealous not only of zombies (because of their power and speed) but of humans as well (as humans use them for many purposes). So, it could be promulgated that it is the perception that makes a thing and creature wrong and right. It is better to open your eyes and look closely at what benefits and what harms the Earth, as depicted in the game (Plants vs Zombies).
